beyond the refrigerator door

Bob Jones University ranked No. 13 in the Most Beautiful Campus category with over 300,000 prospective students reviewed and almost 25,000 surveys submitted to StudentsReviews' first official college rankings.

BJU aviation programs added an FAA-approved, Part 141 Private Pilot Certification Course to the courses already offered under Part 61. This past spring Mark Jaeggli, sophomore accounting major, became the first student to complete the new course.

Kellen Funk, junior prelaw major, received first place in the novice division at the Intercollegiate Debate Tournament at Ball State University and at Owensboro Community Technical College.
Ben Davis, junior history major, received a first place speaker award in the Open Division.

Jess Turner, senior trumpet performance major, was selected as the National Winner of the Music Teachers National Association Young Artist Composition Contest for his Sonata for Trumpet and Piano. Dale Forsythe, BJA sophomore, Junior Woodwinds, and Natalie Parker, BJA graduate, Senior Woodwinds, placed first in their divisions at the MTNA competition.

James Moran, '92 grad, sang for a special Republican rally in Elizabethton, TN. The rally featured guest speaker Bill Frist, the current Senate Majority Leader and a possible presidential candidate in '08. James produced a digitally orchestrated soundtrack which he used for the rally and recorded the CD single "The World Has Yet To See." He presented the CD to Senator Frist.

Dan Forrest, '00 grad, won the University of Kansas Choral Society Composition Contest. This award came with $200 and a premiere performance by the University of Kansas Chamber Choir in concert.

In the National Broadcasters Intercollegiate Broadcast Competition, senior broadcast journalism major Mike Essian won first place in the radio news category for his WBJU-FM newscast. Ryan Berg, senior RTV major, won second place in the radio drama category for Modern Day Martyrs.

Mary Berg, senior Bible major and music minor, was the Young Composers Competition college winner for a band composition she wrote titled "Resurrection." The piece was performed by the Greenville Concert Band at Greenville Technical College.

Accreditation

Bob Jones University received candidacy from the Transnational Association of Christian Colleges and Schools in April 2005. Candidate status gives an institution all the privileges of accreditation. TRACS is a national accrediting body that offers institutional accreditation to Christian colleges, universities, and seminaries. TRACS is recognized by both the U.S. Department of Education and the Council for Higher Education Accreditation and is a member of the International Network for Quality Assurance Agencies in Higher Education. For more information about TRACS, visit www.tracs.org or contact their offices at P.O. Box 328, Forest, Virginia 24551 or by phone at (434) 525-9539.

Doug Schaedel, former speech pathology faculty member, was awarded a special recognition for his contributions to the field of speech-language pathology in 2004 by the South Carolina Speech-Language-Hearing Association. Doug Schaedel died of cancer on Feb. 8, 2005.

The COLLEGIAN

BOB JONES UNIVERSITY

The Collegian is BJU's award-winning student newspaper published 15 times a year, September through June. The following excerpt is from the March 3, 2005, issue.

Nursing Students Prepare to Excel on Licensure Exam

The BJU nursing program has trained more than 700 nurses since the start of the program 26 years ago.

The last big hurdle these graduating students have to overcome before receiving a nursing license is the National Council Licensure Examination.

Last year, BJU was one of four schools out of 23 in SC that had 96 percent or more of its students passing the NCLEX. The national average that year for students passing the test was 85 percent. In the two years prior to last year, 100 percent of BJU nursing students passed the NCLEX.

International BJU Students Cross Oceans and Cultures

Fernando Martins, freshman international business major, first heard about BJU while he was a foreign exchange high school student in Martinsburg, PA.

After his high school graduation, Fernando went back to his hometown of Mococa, Brazil—a city of 65,000 people south of Sao Paulo—but by the fall he found himself at BJU.

He is one of 180 international students, including 46 freshmen, currently attending BJU, and he is one of four students from Brazil at BJU.

Though most of the international students come from Asia, 43 countries have students at BJU this year. South Korea leads the way with 29 students, followed by Canada with 18 and Japan with 12.

Like Fernando, most international students heard about BJU by word of mouth, BJU's greatest advertising tool. Missionary teams, missionaries, and graduates have been sent all over the world over the last three-quarters of a century. They play a big role in influencing prospective students to come to BJU.

"In contrast to most schools, we have increased our international student population quite a bit over this last year despite tighter government restrictions," said Mr. Bryan Boudreau, BJU international admissions counselor.

PASSING the TORCH

On May 7, 2005, Dr. Stephen Jones officially became the fourth president of Bob Jones University and the fourth member of the Jones family to hold this position. After 34 years as president, Dr. Bob Jones III stepped into the role of chancellor. "This is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes," Dr. Bob says.

Stephen's investiture ceremony on May

Dr. Bob had many memorable moments during his presidency. "In the early years of being president, the compassion and understanding of the faculty who had taught me as a student were overwhelming," Dr. Bob says. "Also, the intensity and frequency of chapel preaching drove me to the Word like nothing else."

Dr. Bob will continue to preach in chapel as well as travel around the country challenging Christians to stay true to the Word. "I won't miss the frustrations of moment-by-moment interruptions, but I do look forward to taking what burdens I can off Stephen," Dr. Bob says. "Stephen is a truehearted man of God, earnest and sincere in every particular. He is greatly concerned about people as individuals. God has blessed him with the combination of strength and kindness.

Dr. Bob Jones III and Beneth with Stephen and Erin and their children.

He is a gifted and God-called preacher. His leadership will probably be quieter and gentler than mine, but strong for the Truth and every bit as committed to continuing the Founder's vision."

Stephen knew at an early age that God had called him to the ministry. But it wasn't until he was a teenager that he felt God was calling him to the ministry of BJU. "My calling is to preach and defend the Word of God and to keep the University true to it," Stephen says. "As long as God enables us, we must stay true to the Word and to what God has called us to do. My goal is to minister to young people from every kind of background and assist them in becoming useful for Christ.

"It would be a tragedy for whoever is at the helm of the University to make it anything other than what the Founder established—an institution emphasizing evangelism, orthodoxy, culture, social polish, and excellence in all we do. I come into this position with a great respect for what he desired for the University. I want to further these emphases beyond what they are today and not let any other agenda deter us."

Dr. Bob Wood

Dr. Bob Wood began his ministry as executive vice president in 1977. His experience in business and his heart for the ministry made a perfect match for the position he has held for nearly 29 years. Especially dear to his heart has been his preaching ministry. "I'm so thankful I don't have to give this up when I retire," Dr. Wood says.

Soon after his arrival at BJU, Dr. Wood was instrumental in the inception of BJU Press and has been involved in its growth ever since. "One of the most exciting developments of the University has been our involvement in distance learning," Dr. Wood says. In addition to his involvement in the establishment of BJ LINC and BJ HomeSat, Dr. Wood instituted the University Clinic in 1978.

Dr. Wood is currently writing a book on counseling principles. In addition to writing, upon retiring (as he calls it), he will continue to participate in preaching, employee counseling, management training, working with human resources and the clinic, and sitting on the boards of Gospel Fellowship Association and the Museum & Gallery at Bob Jones University.

"I pray that we will continue to provide students with the tools needed to mold them into the image of Christ and see more young people surrender to become preachers and Christian educators."

Dr. Phil Smith

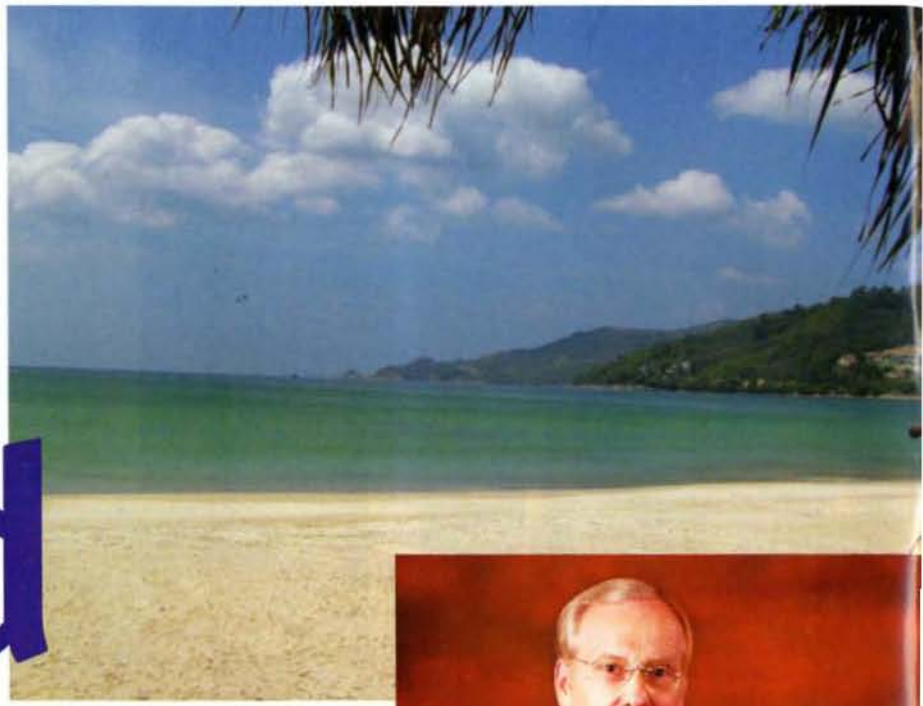
Dr. Phil Smith started as a member of the administration as dean of the College of Arts and Science in 1961, then became registrar in 1965 and provost in 1981. Dr. Smith has seen many advancements in technology over the course of 50 years, including the computer, DVDs, and distance learning. "Things are much different now than they were even 20 years ago," Dr. Smith says. "But what has not changed is the heart of BJU to train students to serve the Lord."

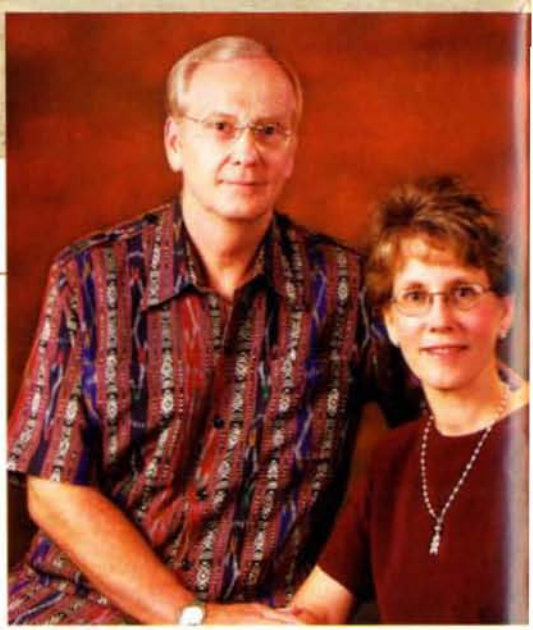
When Dr. Smith started as registrar in 1965, there were 37 majors. Today, there are 128. As provost, Dr. Smith had the privilege of instituting many of these majors, such as nursing and counseling.

"I trust the next generation of administrators will be able to work together as effectively and for as many years as Dr. Bob III, Dr. Wood, Dr. Roy Barton, and I have been able to." Dr. Smith says. "I have every confidence in those selected to carry on the work in the future."

Dr. Smith has had the privilege of serving at BJU with his entire family. His wife Marilyn had worked at Barge Hospital for 44 years (as the longest-working employee of Barge) before retiring, and their children and their spouses are all employed at BJU. The Smiths plan to travel and are looking forward to a more flexible schedule, although we all know he will continue to serve where his heart has been for the past 50 years.

God's WORK IN THE world



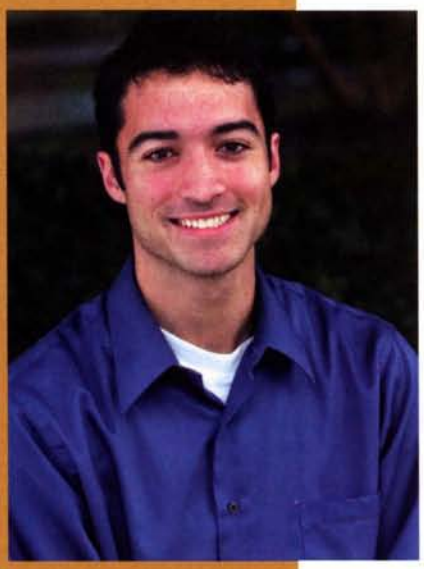


Tsunami 2004—an Open Door

"We were having a wonderful Christmas season with our son, Jed ('99 grad), his wife, Sara (Enloe, '00 grad), and her parents," says Jim Hayes, '77 Bible grad and church planter in Thailand. "We had just finished church services and were heading down to Bangkok to say goodbye at the airport when we started getting phone calls from many local friends informing us that a tsunami had hit Thailand's coastline. They were especially worried because earlier that week we had taken our guests to the exact locations that had been devastated." God's protection was on the Hayes family and their guests that day, and since then Jim and his wife, Kathi, have been spearheading relief efforts across that region.

Jim and Kathi have been in Thailand for 25 years. They are church planters among an unreached group called the Thai-Khmer. "We have established a central city church in the province

Always Best



Daniel Apple, a junior premed major, and his family have visited Thailand on a number of occasions, but their latest trip in December of 2004 was one they'll never forget!

"We tried for almost a year before our trip to Thailand to get into the resort we had stayed in before on the west side of the island of Phuket on Patong Beach," Daniel says, "but were told that there were no rooms available, so we had to stay on the east side of the island. Because my mom is Thai, we had 'connections' and were willing to stay in any resort on the west side, but even they fell through. We were really getting frustrated and a little angry about the whole thing, so we decided to go to the resort on December 25 to try one last time to get in. We were shocked to see so many empty rooms, but were still told we couldn't stay. It took less than 24 hours for our family to realize why."

On December 26, Daniel and his family were swimming off the beach on the east side of Phuket when they realized the water was rising at an incredible rate. "At first we were told that a dam must have broken, but before long we got the news of the tsunami and that the entire west side of the island was destroyed. At that moment our family learned the lesson of a lifetime!"

"Later that day, we had the opportunity to meet a German man and his son who had barely survived the waves at Patong Beach," Daniel says. "At the time we met them they still had not found a couple of their family members. We were able to encourage them and pray for them. We gave them a phone card, some money, and our phone number back in the States. Thankfully, weeks after we returned home, my dad heard that they had found all their family members. Because of all they went through, they are very open to the Gospel, and we are thankful that the Lord was able to use us in that way."

On December 27, Daniel and his family went back to Patong Beach and saw the devastation firsthand. "I was reminded that God is in control of every aspect of our lives—even when we don't understand. We were so upset earlier in the week because we didn't get our way, but in the end we realized God's way is always best."

of Surin and are now trying to start village house churches that will help the people minister without requiring foreign funds."

Since the tsunami hit on Dec. 26, 2004, the Hayes have been busy helping the hurting throughout Thailand. "Our tsunami relief involvement has been in three phases," Jim explains. "First, I have channeled funds through our personal contacts to help with medical needs at the Phangnga Provincial Hospital that was most involved with tsunami patients in that region. Second, I went with a medical team from our mission board and others, including three BJU grads, Brad Blanton, David Walton, and Karen Hall, to Sri Lanka to help the medical relief efforts in this closed country that lost so many nationals. Third, back in Thailand, I have been on the phone daily trying to help provide clean drinking water for the villages most affected by the tsunami. Many BJU grads have helped with donations, including $10,000 to help with our clean water project. The response from Fundamental believers around the world has been amazing!"

"Much good is being done, and the Gospel seed is being planted," Jim says. "How we need more workers to reap the harvest! I would ask BJU students and grads to look around them and see the fields of the world that are ready to be harvested and use the skills they have acquired at BJU to make a global impact."

Uniforms & Missions

In April 2001, the Peruvian Air Force accidentally shot down the airplane that missionary Jim Bowers and his family were traveling in over the Amazon. Jim's wife and baby girl were killed, but Jim, his son, and the pilot survived. Jim's brother, Dan Bowers, took several mission trips to Peru after the accident. It was during this time that Dan felt led to start Missionsports, along with his friend, Mike Eccleston, '95 marketing management grad, pictured above with a national.

Missionsports provides a needed service to Christian schools and uses the profits to fund mission trips and camps on the mission field. "We have contracted with national and international manufacturers who offer custom and stock uniforms that will allow student athletes to perform at their best while meeting necessary dress-code standards," Mike says. "Missionsports understands the financial constraints faced by many Christian schools, and we strive to provide the best quality products and equipment at reasonable prices."

Even though providing this service to Christian schools is meeting a great need, the real heart of Missionsports is missions. "We're looking for Christian young people to go on our mission trips who truly have a heart for missions. This summer we're going back to Peru to do some construction for a Bible institute in the jungle, host a Bible conference, and run a soccer competition. We usually take a couple of Christian school administrators and some high school students, college students, and young adults to support the work of local missionaries and national pastors.

"The Lord gives us countless resources here in the U.S., and it's up to us to be willing to submit those to Him," Mike adds. "While He may have some serve at secular jobs, we all have to stop and ask ourselves just how much we're doing for Him.

"It's exciting to observe the young people we take on our trips realizing for the first time that, although it seems many foreign Christians have nothing, those Christians truly understand they have everything because they have Christ. In addition, we see people who have nothing and also do not have the Lord, and we need to reach them with the Gospel.

"The years fly by after graduation, and before they know it, students might realize they aren't doing that much for Christ. God is preparing young people at BJU now for the ministry He has for them in the future—they need to act on it!"

To find out more about Missionsports, contact Mr. Mike Eccleston at www.missionsports.com

Many Hats

Hundreds of BJU graduates are missionaries right here in the U.S. Deb Spreacker, '99 culinary arts grad, has been ministering at Camp Cedine in Tennessee for four years. "I enjoy using my food service training for the Lord," Deb says. "My training at BJU was phenomenal! Because of my training I am very confident about what I do. I order supplies and am the primary cook at the camp, preparing meals for conferences, camps, and retreats."

Camp Cedine is a Bible camp primarily for African-American inner-city children. "Because of my training in Bible at BJU, I am prepared to wear many hats here at the camp," Deb says. "In addition to food service, I also teach Bible lessons, coach the Bible quiz teams, help with the staff children, and coach some of the athletic teams.

"Students need to make the most of the numerous ministry opportunities at BJ to go on extension and prepare for their future ministries, and not just get book knowledge. I gleaned so much from my Bible classes and chapel—which has prepared me for my ministry."

Church Planting in Iraq

Dr. Edgar Feghaly, '80 grad, was impressed with the need for good Fundamental missionaries in the Middle East after attending a missions conference in the early '90s. "God used this to challenge my heart to take the Gospel to those countries," Dr. Feghaly says. Since then, Dr. Feghaly has established ministries in five Middle Eastern countries, using primarily national men, and planted a church in Baghdad, Iraq, in 2003.

Edgar and his wife Rosann ('80 grad)

"The work in Iraq is surviving all of the unrest and the terrorists right now," Dr. Feghaly says. "So far the Lord has miraculously protected our church. Last Christmas the U.S. Marines discovered five trucks loaded with explosives just five houses away. Capturing those trucks avoided tragedy and many deaths.

"Our goal at New Testament Baptist Church is to establish a radio station broadcasting in English and Arabic that could reach over five million people in the city of Baghdad and its suburbs. We are also in need of property for a permanent residence for the church and for a Bible college. The Lord has opened a door in the Sudan to build a Bible college for the training of hundreds of men to spread the Gospel to their people."

Here is the seventh in a series of faculty spotlights, giving you a sneak peek behind the scenes at just a few of our many faculty members.

Yep - faculty are real people too!

Building on Blessings

It's impossible to set down the range of emotions sweeping over me as I step into the presidency of Bob Jones University. Two years of discussion and four months of official transition have distilled those emotions into this—peace of heart and deep gratitude.

BJU is indebted to the Lord for His abundant blessings throughout our 78-year history. Though the road has not always (or even often) been easy, He called this place into existence to prepare Christian young people to the highest level of their abilities, while rooting them in the unchanging Word of God. He joined the hearts of a great pioneer generation of faculty and staff behind that mission and blessed them with the opportunity to pour their lives into thousands of the most wonderful Christian students assembled anywhere.

God's blessings in the present are equally remarkable. By His grace He has kept BJU true to His Word and His purpose for this place. He continues to overwhelm us by calling the godly faculty and staff needed to prepare this and future generations of students to an ever higher level of spiritual and academic rigor. The team the Lord has assembled here is composed of men and women of varying backgrounds and stellar abilities, each with a heart and gifts devoted to the Lord and to the students each one serves.

All of this is cause for tremendous rejoicing and excitement. However, it's also cause for great soberness. My greatest fear is that I would ever do anything to forfeit God's smile upon this ministry or betray those who have given of their lives or substance to see BJU to this point.

A pastor friend wrote some encouraging words that I have reflected upon frequently during this time of transition. He reminded me that administration ultimately rests on only one set of shoulders. How grateful I am that God's shoulders are infinitely able to bear the future of BJU!

God has brought the University to this moment and has showered us with blessings upon the way. I am thankful to the Lord, the BJU Board, my father, the faculty and staff, and the students for this opportunity of building upon God's rich blessings in this place. It will be exciting to see what great things the Lord has yet in store! —Stephen Jones

New Round of Friendship Banquets

In May of this year BJU finished a two-year cycle of Friendship Banquets that was extremely well-received. Since then, we've been reformatting the approach and program to put together an evening you won't want to miss. Please keep an eye on the itinerary section of the BJU Review for upcoming banquets in your area.

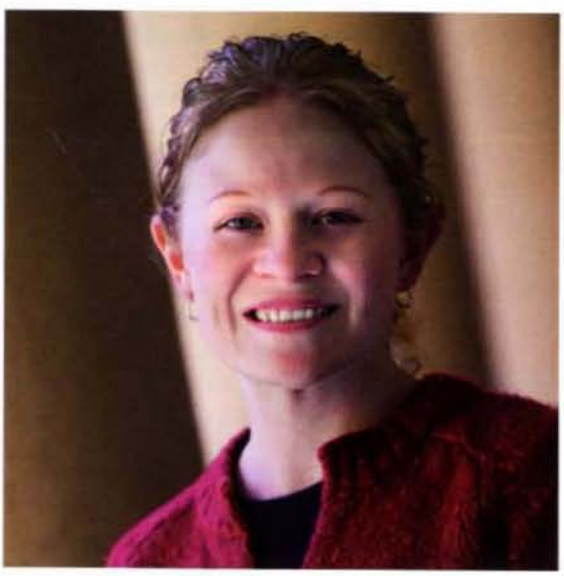
thro THE EYES of faith

Adam Haas—senior, restaurant management major, Mishawaka, IN

One summer I needed $4,900 in order to come back to school. I was able to make $900 working and received over $3,900 in scholarships so that I could return. Through my years here at BJU, the Lord has miraculously provided for my needs by supplying over $14,000 in scholarships and anonymous gifts!



Autumn Shaeffer—'05 English education grad, Xenia, Ohio

God has provided for my financial needs through numerous ways during my years at BJU. I can remember many instances where I had no money at all, and then I would receive a care package from my church with quarters for laundry or a note with a few dollars in my mailbox. The Lord truly takes care of His children and provides all our needs and beyond.

Amanda Greenawalt—senior multi-categorical special education major, Connellsville, PA

I saw how God's hand was particularly evident in working through the passing of my father in April 2003. I had finals that coming week and no way home, but the next day I found out that my friends had made arrangements for me to fly home despite finals. I still don't know who paid for my flight costs, but I know that God's hand was in it all.

Mike Moses—'05 Bible grad, Waterford, MI

The most remarkable manifestation of God's provision occurred during my sophomore year. I needed $3,000 in order to return to school after Christmas, but nothing happened over the break. I came back to school in January trusting in the Lord to provide. After classes started, He miraculously provided all $3,000 in one day!

God's power is all around us in the smallest plant and in the biggest ocean. At times we see His hand touch our lives in a special way that is often beyond our highest expectations. It is at those times in particular that we see God through the eyes of faith.

Trevor Loflin—senior physics major, Sonora, CA

My parents were atheists and were divorced when I was very young. When I was in high school, my mother tried to start her own medical practice; but when the practice failed, we lost our savings and most of our property. I was saved through the youth group at my aunt's church. Although I wanted to attend BJU, I had no idea how to raise the money. However, God allowed me to achieve perfect SAT scores, which was widely publicized, and caused many people to donate toward my college fund. Altogether, their donations paid for more than three semesters!

Tami Barnhard—senior early childhood education major, Ravenna, MI

I heard about BJU's student work program but feared the responsibility and pressure. My junior year I signed up for it anyway; but at the end of the year, I still owed $2,000. I was discouraged that I had worked so hard and still failed. I began to pray that God would work a miracle, and He did. My grandmother had a burden to help with my bill and paid the $2,000 in full!

Dana Boomershine—'05 English education/teaching English as a second language grad, Fulton, MI

I believed God wanted me to return to Belarus for a second summer of ministry, but the money was not coming in. After several weeks, I was still confident that I was supposed to go. I called the missionaries that I would be working with and told them to plan on me. They said, "Good, because we already bought your ticket! It's on us."

John Leone—'05 grad, health, fitness, and recreation major, Waverly, KS

I came to BJ with only $800 in my pocket. My parents encouraged me that if the Lord wanted me here, He would provide. As each semester ended, I never knew if I would be back, but God faithfully provided for me to keep returning. In fact, my senior year a family friend offered to pay off all my school debt so that I could return debt-free!

PREPARING YOUR HOME SCHOOLED STUDENT FOR Co

Parents of a teenager who is planning to go to college have a lot of questions. Is he ready to leave home? Are we ready to let him? How are our finances? Parents who are home schooling their teen have many of the same questions and perhaps one other—have we done all we should to prepare him for this entirely new setting? For a number of years, BJU has followed the progress of our students who are home school graduates, and we've found that they do as well in every way on our campus as students from all other high school backgrounds.

Keys for Success

We have also found that adapting to college life is easier for students whose parents have done the following:

- Provide supervised social activities for teens. BJU life has many social events, from lunches to concerts. Having some experience with and being comfortable in different social situations helps a student have confidence and enjoy college more.
- Encourage teens to seek out leadership opportunities. Church youth groups and community projects, for example, offer students avenues for developing the skills of leadership.
- Prepare teens for classroom methods. Sitting in a room with 30 or 90 other students for an hour's lecture need not be a culture shock. Take your teen to formal lectures at your local library to practice listening as part of a group. Ask teens to take notes on sermons to sharpen outlining skills, and require them to be prompt to appointments to get used to arriving at classes on time.
- Require accountability. College students rarely have anyone to remind them individually of their responsibilities. Teachers give out assignment sheets, but the students must keep their own schedules and budget their time on their own.
- Let go. One of the best—and also one of the hardest—things parents can do for teens is to let them meet the everyday challenges of college life themselves.

Kara Kinomoto, junior accounting major from Bothell, WA—Home schooled for 9 years

The BJU Academy of Home Education was very helpful in setting the standard of excellence that is expected at BJU, and my classes were specifically geared toward college preparation.

The Academy of Home Education

Transcripts of grades are required for all college applications. To make keeping and reporting grades easier for home school students, BJU Press offers The Academy of Home Education. This service can provide a formal transcript for your student any time during his high school career. Visit www.bjup.com/services/ahe for more details on AHE (available for first through twelfth grades).

BJ Testing and Evaluation

At BJU, home school graduates apply for admission the same way other students apply, with only one variation. Although we require standardized achievement test results to support all applications, when applications are from home school students, we ask for these results before making decisions on their applications.

BJU Press offers a service to home school families to make the standardized testing and record keeping easy and convenient. To find out more about BJ Testing and Evaluation, please visit www.bjup.com/services/testing/academic_testing/index.

Sorting through all the paperwork was confusing at first, but my admissions counselor was helpful in answering my questions about the ACT, the Life Scholarship, and my high school credits.

Because English is my third language, I had to study very hard to get a good score on the TOEFL (Test of English as a Foreign Language) before I came to BJU. Several times I felt like giving up, but my admissions counselor kept in contact with me and was very encouraging. Both he and my advisor were praying for me.

Rebekah Barr, sophomore nursing major from Trenton, GA—Home schooled for 12 years

To help prepare me for college, my parents set up a schedule for school; we always started class at the same time of day, had specific class periods, and had homework.

When I came to BJU, everyone was very patient with me, even though I knew practically nothing about college life. The ordinary "freshman problems" didn't bother me.

John Borkert, sophomore premed major from Aurora, CO—Home schooled for 10 years

Filling out the admissions application online eliminated all the hassles of paper applications and gave me a quick, convenient way to apply.

Major

Mathematics ▲

overview

The mathematics major provides a thorough understanding of mathematical concepts. It teaches theory and the application of mathematics and also develops in-depth comprehension and critical thinking skills which apply to a wide range of career opportunities in industry and business.

current student

Franco Jean, senior from Stratford, CT
"Linear Algebra is challenging. The concepts force you to develop more complex logic, but it's fun."

sample classes

- Transcendental Functions • Discrete Math
- Elementary & Linear Algebra • Calculus

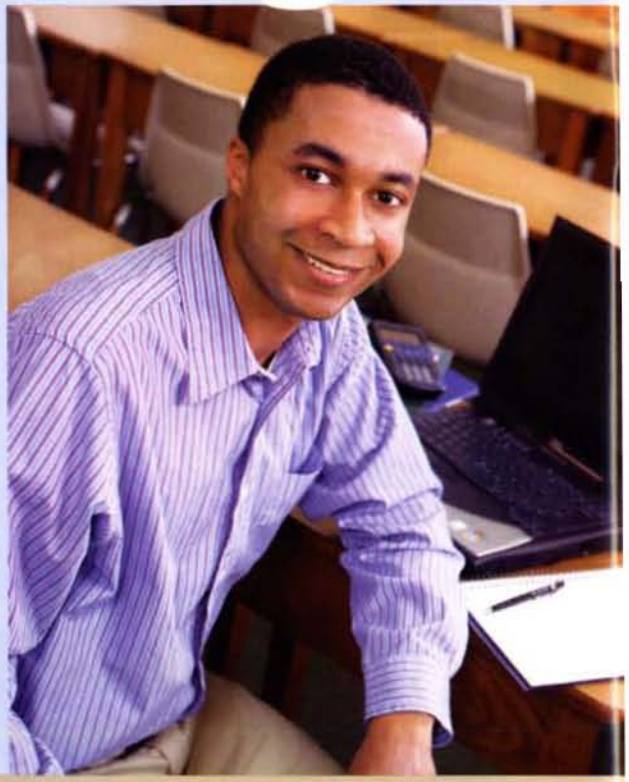
graduates

Karen Abels, '96 grad, M.A. general education, '98
Algebra II and Precalculus teacher, Harvest Christian Academy in Guam

Melanie Brammer Fulton, '01 grad
Ph.D. student in mathematics, Virginia Tech in Blacksburg, VA

Don Bobo Jr., '83 grad
Vice President/General Manager, Edwards Lifesciences in Irvine, CA

Related majors include Actuarial Science and Operations Research.



Camp Ministries ▼

overview

The camp ministries major provides preparation for various camp ministries, including adult, youth, and children's camps. The courses are designed for the development of knowledge and skills in Bible, camp work, ministerial studies and practice, and oral communication.

"I have really appreciated the Personal Evangelism class. I have found that it helps me as I talk to the unsaved about the Lord. I feel more confident in approaching people about their need for Christ."

sample classes

- Youth Work • Camp Administration
- Foundations for Biblical Lifestyle • Camp Program

graduates

Tracy Fressel, '89 grad
Associate Pastor, Inter-City Baptist Church in Allen Park, MI

Jon Craven, '94 grad
Executive Director, Higher Ground Baptist Bible Camp in Sterling, AK

Tim Church, '04 grad
Grounds Manager, Woodlands Camp & Conference Center in Cleveland, GA

Related majors include Youth Ministries, Child Care Ministry, Bible Evangelism, Women's Ministries, Pastoral Studies, and Christian Missions.

Focus

BJU offers 128 different majors, so many that you're probably unfamiliar with a good number of them. Each issue of the Review will feature a quick glance at four majors in this Major Focus feature.

▲ Creative Writing

overview

The creative writing major provides preparation for the vital need of professionally enhanced Christian witness through print and electronic media. It aids in the development of proper language usage and creative writing skills. It also focuses on application of imaginative writing to the areas of fiction, drama, film and video, and poetry.

current student

Katherine G. Lovely, sophomore from Danielsville, GA
"Creative Writing pulls the best out of you. My teacher delights and entertains the class with examples of top-notch writings and then gives the little push and confidence needed for us to develop our own skills."

sample classes

- Short Story Writing • Expository Writing
- Play Writing • Writing for Children

graduates

Trisha White Priebe, '03 grad
Freelance writer and journalism professor in Watertown, WI

Rebecca Hammond, '99 grad
Author, Winds Cove, published by Ambassador Press; Cowriter, Shipwrecked on Pleasure Island, Majesty Music in Greenville, SC

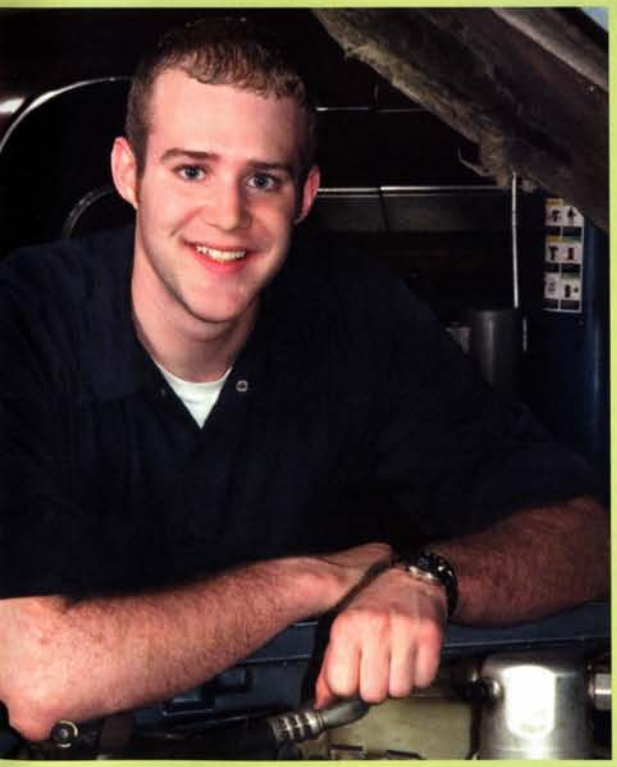
Related majors include Technical Writing, Public Relations Journalism, Publishing, Print Journalism, and Broadcast Journalism.



◀ Automotive Service Management

overview

The automotive service management major prepares for the day-to-day operation as an automobile and/or diesel repairman. You will also receive the background for preparation in specialization or for shop ownership. The training is accomplished through classroom instruction, practical occupational training, and "hands-on" experience.

current student

Lee Kistner, senior from Albion, NY
"Gasoline Engine Overhaul is an excellent class, since we can be in the shop and carefully disassemble engines and see real problems we will experience later in our careers."

sample classes

- Basic Welding • Hydraulic Servicing
- Fuel, Ignition, & Emission Systems • Diesel Engine Overhaul

Major began in 2003.

Related majors include Auto/Diesel Mechanics and Aircraft Maintenance.
